

In the sentences below, fill in the numbers (in words).
You may find it easiest to do the first one after the next two. Then take the letters in the boxes and put them in the same numbered spaces below to find out what the soldiers had to do.

The number of men that came to help

The number of men that went home

The number that remained

The number of men that lapped

The number in each company

The number of men that actually had to fight in the battle (If you can't get the number to fit, think of a football score.)
